Leo is the fifth sign of the Western zodiac. The lion represented in the constellation of Leo is associated with the brave Nemean lion of ancient Greek mythology. Its hide was proof against iron, bronze and stone. The lion was slain by Hercules, who lost a finger in the process. Leo is a Fixed, Masculine, Fire sign ruled by the Sun. Those born with the Sun in Leo are characterized as being creative, expansive and enthusiastic. Leo likes to dominate. ◆ Fixed signs are associated with resistance to change. They are stable, strong and enduring, with the ability to see things through to the end. Fire signs imply enthusiasm above all, and can be entertaining and optimistic. They are good at starting new projects, but not so good at finishing them. The Masculine association is one of directness and outgoing, extrovert behavior. Apparently confident, although appearances can be deceiving. ◆

Interpretation of the birth chart can be thought of in terms of three major facets of the individual: how you appear to others, your innermost desires and aspirations, and what you are really like. The characteristics associated with your Sun sign, Leo, are not absolutes, and should be seen only as likely dispositions. ◆ The character of Leo is amongst the most uncomplicated of all the signs. Leos are above all self confident, with a tendency to treat their opinions as facts. Leos will take the lead at any opportunity and are generally good organizers. At your best you are generous, enthusiastic and affectionate. At your worst, a physical and intellectual bully, pompous and conceited. ◆ Mostly hard workers, Leos need to respect and admire their superiors. You set high standards and expect the same of others. It is not uncommon for Leos to form attitudes and opinions quite early in life that will never change. Arguing with a dogmatic and stubborn Leo can be a frustrating and unproductive exercise. ◆ You are more than likely quite sensitive. Your hurt will come mostly from genuine surprise that others disagree with you.

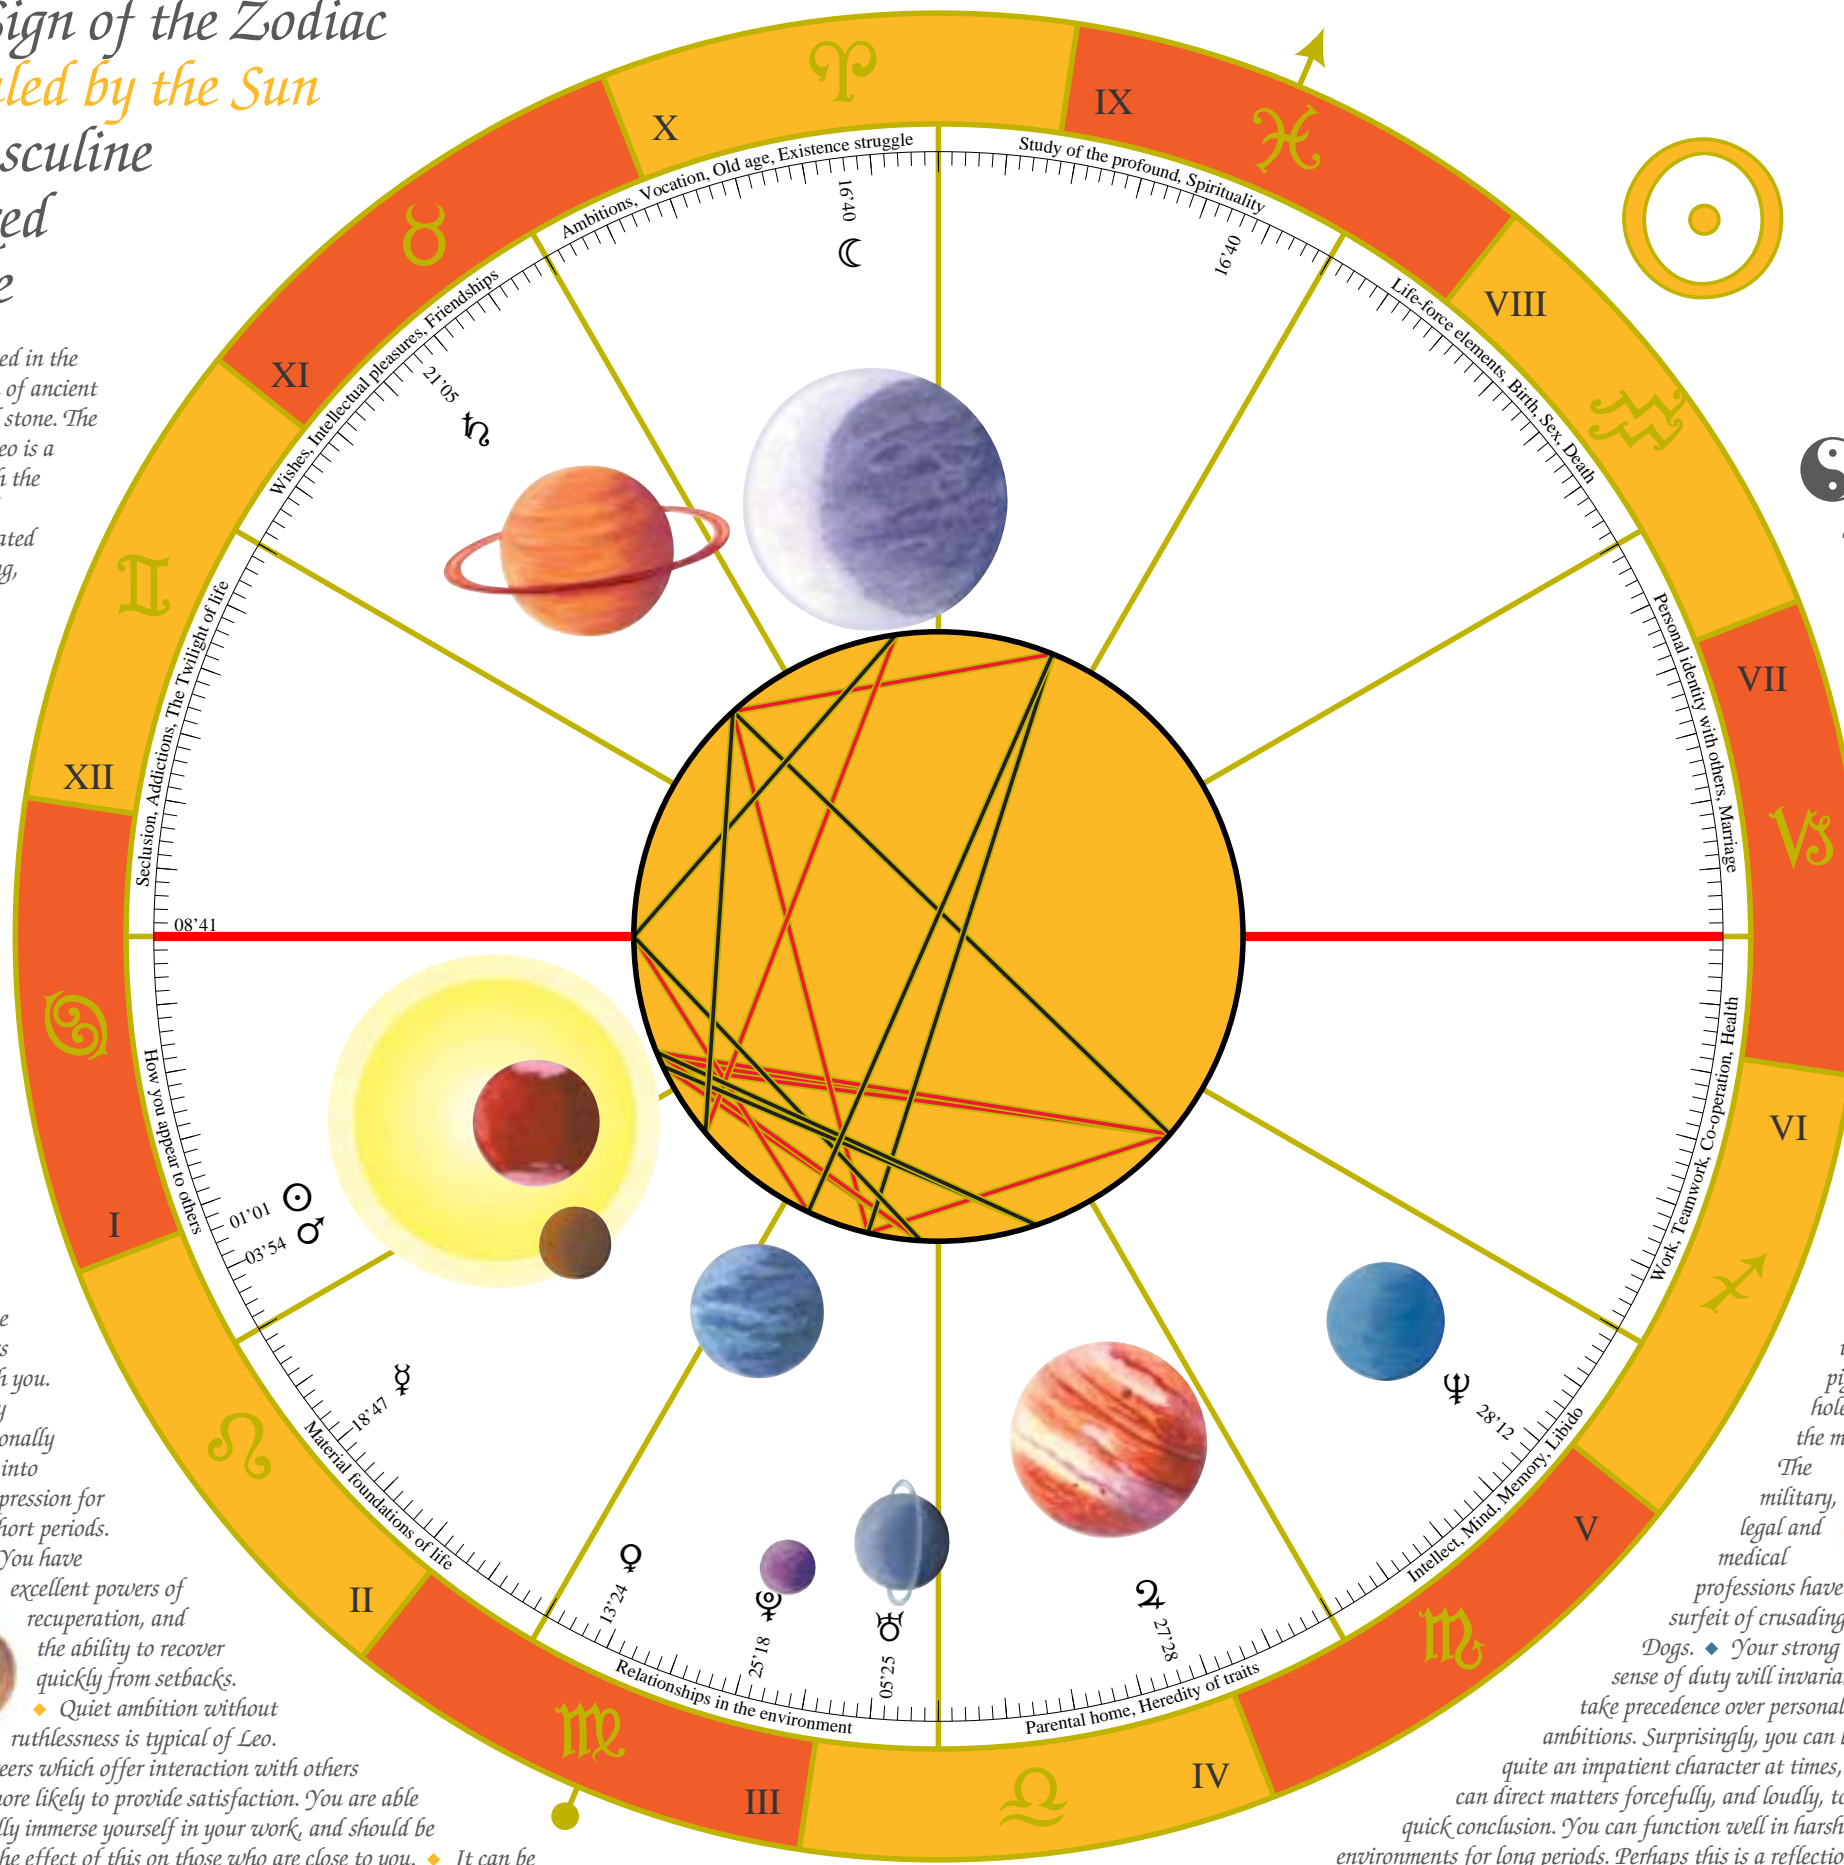

Leos very occasionally fall into depression for short periods. You have excellent powers of recuperation, and the ability to recover quickly from setbacks.

◆ Quiet ambition without ruthlessness is typical of Leo. Careers which offer interaction with others are more likely to provide satisfaction. You are able to totally immerse yourself in your work, and should be aware of the effect of this on those who are close to you. ◆ It can be difficult for Leos to settle down in a permanent relationship. However, once established, you express love and affection in a positive way, and are renowned for your loyalty. Some Leo wives will tend to adopt the masculine role. ◆ Leo parents can overwhelm quiet and sensitive children. Leo children may be bossy and prone to tantrums. They are by nature attention-seeking and need to have their boundaries clearly set.

◆ In matters of love, Dogs both male and female do not enter into relationships quickly or lightly. A Dog woman will invariably be a friend before she is a lover, but once love is given it is deep and lasting. Dogs get on best with Horse and Tiger people. Relationships with Dragons and Sheep can be difficult. The Dog parent is easily manipulated by the child. Dog children are mostly cheerful and undemanding. They respond to encouragement more than others.

Year of the Dog

The Dog is the eleventh sign of the Chinese horoscope. The Dog is Yin and is fixed to the Metal element. The characteristics of the Dog are similar to the occidental sign of Libra. Yin is negative, feminine, and associated with the Night. Subjective Yin signs trust their feelings about themselves and others. You tend to be more concerned with the spiritual than the physical. As all opposites attract in nature, Yin attracts Yang. The Metal element association bestows an ambitious and hard working nature. Metal people tend to be self-reliant and rigid in their outlook, and find it difficult to compromise. Metal people can be more materialistic than others.

◆ The Dog, however, is characterized as being the most reliable, honest and non-materialistic of people. Resolute, unpretentious and with a strong sense of justice, the Dog will go to great lengths to avoid a fight, but is not afraid should one be unavoidable. A Dog will more often than not choose to walk the middle ground, not through fear of making a decision, but because of a natural ability to objectively see both sides of an argument. Others should consider themselves lucky to count you as a friend.

◆ Being highly idealistic, it is not unusual for Dogs to become cynical later in life. You speak plainly, and appreciate this attribute in others. The objectivity of Dogs is limiting in some ways, sometimes making it difficult to see "between the lines" of a situation. To a Dog, there is only black and white, no shades of gray in between. Most things in a Dog's life, including how others are perceived, reside in neat pigeon-holes in the mind.

The military, legal and medical professions have a surfeit of crusading Dogs. ◆ Your strong sense of duty will invariably take precedence over personal ambitions. Surprisingly, you can be quite an impatient character at times, and can direct matters forcefully, and loudly, to a quick conclusion. You can function well in harsh environments for long periods. Perhaps this is a reflection of the Dog's underlying pessimism. Dogs don't think life is tough - they know it is.
